"Every man for his business," says the old proverb; and though the pilot was not a man of great intellectual power, he steered that ship out splendidly and on all board felt infinitely safer than if Louis Napoleon or Lord Palmerston had been at the helm. Just before we passed Sandy Hook, a large vessel of all sail set was seen standing in for New York. The captain through his glass attentively surveyed her for a few moments, and though it was impossible from position and great distance to see her name, yet he gave it to us without delay. It was the "Harcourt," and as well as all the sailing ships, the steamers the spectacle was grand. The role majestic, the sails upon the waves, and seemed vain of her beauty and grace of motion. I was curious to know how the captain ascertained her name, and on inquiry found it to be as follows: In London there is an establishment known simply as "Lloyd's," where the names of ships of all sizes, and as far as possible of all countries, are registered together, with the name of the ports in which they are owned, and any other valuable information which can be obtained with regard to them. To each ship is given a particular number and annually or semi-annually a book is published containing these particulars. And all sailing masters make it a point to possess one of these books. When ships come in sight they run up to the head, first their national ensign, then small flags containing their numbers. With the aid of his glass the officer of the other ship can make out these signs

Though we are sailing in the pleasant month of May, and exposed to gale winds and bright sunshine, the weather was a continued succession of fog and storms during the whole voyage. Sometimes the storm in the midst of a gale was grand beyond description. The figure of a rolling mountain high in height not strong. Though they may not rise to the height of mountains above the level of the sea in general, relatively to the position of the ship at that time, they do so beyond doubt. After a strong gale, for several hours, the waves increase to great size, and the color of the sea becomes a deep green; if the sun looks upon the ocean for a moment, as the waves roll and dash against each other, this deep green is tinged by a surly of dazzling whiteness, whose almost deadly, no poet's pen can describe.

Bellevue Falls, and once more our eyes are blessed in seeing the beautiful Connecticut. Our course leads us up its valley as far as Newbury, Vt., where it is established under the patronage of the Vermont Conservation Commission, the largest and most successful conservation force one of the finest schools in the country. We have seen many times before the Connecticut from Turner's Falls, near the Massachusetts and Vermont line, to its mouth, and never without special joy. What broad, expansive meadows, from the falls just mentioned down to the narrows a little below Middletown, Conn. They are almost as rich as the prairies of the West, and fairly shine with the fosterings of man.

What spreading elms in almost every field to creep heavenward, and stretching out their sweeping branches into forms of majestic beauty. Below the civil engineers who laid out the site of the Town and the architects who planned, and the masons and carpenters who reared those public edifices and those private residences, have been sleeping in their narrow homes during a succession of generations since Greenvale is a busy hive of manufacturing industry. It goes largely into the cotton and paper manufacturing, giving steady and remunerative employment to hundreds of operatives, representatives of many different nationalities.

Just outside the city proper we behold the most striking evidence of the great wealth of Norwich, as seen in the residences of its "first families." These homes of fortune's favorites are among the most attractive we have ever yet seen. All the fables of accomplished architecture have been expended upon

If I should say that the earnest man of God meant to declare that he could with himself antagonized with any anathema that could proceed from Christ, and that he could suffer in the flesh, and that he would willingly bear it, if by it he might rescue his brethren—his kinsmen according to the flesh—without regard to what that curse might involve, for it would not involve his own fall and eternal condemnation, but only what he might endure in the flesh—then such a view would harmonize with every principle of purity and elevated piety.

I think the apostle intended to say that he was earnestly desirous of the salvation of the Jews, and that desire on his part extended to a willingness to make any sacrifice in his power to make as a Christian man or a Christian minister in the flesh.

From the report of the Anglican Clerical Committee, during the year 1861-2, there was expended by this body in building operations, new chapels, schools, alterations, &c., no less a sum than £104,481. The average expenditure of the body was £1,000 per annum. The average of the funds was £100,000 per annum. It is observable also, that by far the largest portion of this sum is represented by cash payments. The word "borrowed" does occur here and there, but its introduction is not frequent.

Of sixteen organs erected during the year, cost £240, one £238, another £235, and the rest lesser sums, all except one are left without debt, and all except one without any annual charge attaching thereto. The organ at the church of St. Andrew has the honor of having erected the most costly instrument; and the Ilington organ, in the Manchester Third Circuit, stands alone as having any annual doties of husbands and wives toward each other. No visitor was permitted to go near them, and they were fed only at intervals at the grim faces of the jailers. The bishop states that the test was attended with the most wholesome results. In most cases the parties were excellent friends in a few days; and very few could be persuaded to leave the hospital. The only gratifying circumstance was, that they had scarcely received a cure when a second application was made by persons who had already gone through the ordeal.

No Necessity for Levins.—A man whom Dr. Johnson once reproved for following a useless and demoralizing business said: "You know, doctor, that I must live." The brave old doctor of everything mean and hateful coolly replied that he did not "see the least necessity for that."

EARL OLD HEMALD—Let me tell the lovers of color, through your wide-spread columns, what took place in Newbern, North Carolina, on last Sabbath, the 12th, in the colored Methodist Episcopal church. I had engaged to preach and to administer Communion to children, and the sacrament of the Lord's Supper—a service that no colored minister was ever allowed to officiate in, in North Carolina. The church on Railroad Street was literally packed with men, women and children—colored and white, officers and privates. Chaplain Whitcomb preached in the usual manner. Mr. Moxley, the pastor, presided, and, in practical sermon. At the close your humble servant then commenced reading the service of baptism, and with the assistance of Chaplain Whitcomb baptized 105 children—a scene that will be long remembered by saint and sinner. In the afternoon I went to preach as well as I could, from Exodus iii. 1-6, "And thus shall ye call it," &c. 1. The command. 2. The direction how. 3. The reason assigned why they should eat it in haste, &c. After which I proceeded to consecrate the bread and wine, and Chaplain Whitcomb and myself administered the Sacrament to the young men; and the Lord's people did eat it—both white and colored. Glorious to God be a great day in Newbern; and the love of Christ prevailed away from some of these old prejudices, and they began to feel that God is no respecter of persons, but that every nation they that fear him and work righteousness are accepted of him.

regiment, and at 7 1-2 o'clock I had a r eternities for the soldiers, and we had a blessed time. There were some earnest prayers by the soldiers for the President and for the officers of our regiment, for their wives, and their children. One would think that the most wish was a relative of one of our officers. I would like to listen to these fervent prayers. At the close of the prayer meeting some 30 rose for prayers, and it was very evident that God was in our midst. Truly the harvest is great, but the laborers are few. You have heard complaints at home that many, or some, of the chaplains are negligent, and are away from their duty, and there is too much truth in these assertions. But I must not find fault with others, lest I should be found in the same fault. This is a great work of God, and much depends on the piety of the chaplain. O how much, how very much, he needs the baptism of the Holy Ghost to be able for his work. I am sure that at the good friends of the soldiers, there is a barrel of books. Spelling books are most needed; also on Testaments and some cards of the alphabet.

The 1st North Carolina Colored Regiment, to which I belong, has, I believe, the very best of officers, from the Colonel down—not all Christians but all gentlemen; and I hope they soon will be all Christians.

LETTER FROM NORWICH, CONN

Norwich is one of the several Illiputian cities which are found scattered here and there "in the midst of steady habita." Two hundred and four years ago, Rev. James Fitch and thirty-two others purchased of the deservedly renowned Uncas, Sachem of the Mohegans, a plot of land, nine miles square, for which they paid the enormous (?) sum of £70. Immediately after this purchase, the settlement of the town was commenced.

It is divided into three parts. Chelmsford, Le

It is unusual for a city to have a business landscape that is so concentrated in one area. The Chelsea district in New York City is no exception. The city's picturesque architecture is a city prize. Here are but few buildings, either public or private, of imposing architectural aspect; but rising up they do, on a succession of terraces, the combination of which presents a scene unique and somewhat grand. The "Town" has a very antique look about it. The city engineers who laid out the site of the Town and the architects who planned, and the masons among carpenters who reared those public edifices and those private residences, have been sleeping in their narrow homes during a succession of generations. New Haven is a busy hive of manufacturing industry. It goes largely into the cotton and paper manufacture, giving steady and remunerative employment to thousands of operatives, representatives of many different nations.

Just outside the city proper we behold the most striking evidence of the great wealth of Norwich, and even in the residences of its "first families." These homes of fortune's favorites are among the most attractive we have ever yet seen. All the rules of accomplished architecture have been expended upon him. The anointing of the Holy Spirit has reached him, and he cannot rest in the ordinary callings of life. He has long been struggling under a sense of duty which unites him for everything else. He is almost persuaded to yield, and a few words of intelligent counsel and encouragement may settle the question whether he will preach the gospel or "serve tables," save his own soul and the souls of others, or "be content with this condition." Be careful, how you approach him; for it is a delicate question, and he may seek to hide the truth.

If he says he lacks the power which a preacher ought to have, tell him "all power" is given to him who said, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature;" and if he tarry at Jerusalem he "shall be endued with power from on high." If he says he lacks the literary qualifications to a known as this passage is one of obscurity. Any method, therefore, obscure would be an effectual means of better understanding of St. Paul's teaching if it is in all its connections, the common-sense view of it would be to embrace the intention of the apostle. Men are generally used without a key meaning, and must therefore be understood.

firmly with all the great principles of the Christian religion, and was sustained by divine revelation. To say some unheard of or extravagant thing of the gushing feelings of a heart set on fire for human welfare, when he only had a high emotion in strong words, that he merely made a reproach to him, served so.

When the apostle as says,—O that I might say as you say,—that statement that would suggest that the Jews, and thereby rescue and save statement of Christ is not sufficient, only be a misfortune to attribute such to the holy apostle. Equally unfortunate to regard the great apostle to the Lord as ready to consent to be forever a Jew and holiness if he could be the his kinsmen according to the flesh, would be a standing reproach to St. Paul that he truly said. Less could be said to him than that he was a Jew. There is no principle in contribute in the Godhead that words, thoughts or expressions, and would not have been the ideas of St. Paul even excepting the Architecture itself, a leader that the earnest man of God meant to come to the people, and that he could with himself antagonized the man that could proceed from Christ, and would suffer in the flesh, and that he bear it, if by it he might reach his brethren, as to the flesh—with their own flesh and eternal, for that what that curse might involve, for it was his own flesh and eternal, for it was what he might endure in the flesh, and would harmonize with every principle of elevated piety.

The apostle intended to say that he was the man of the salvation of the Jews, and that his part extended to a willingness to die in his power to make as a Christian minister in the flesh.

The following curious facts are stated:

The following curious facts are stated by the Revue Medicale:—"The earth is inhabited by 1,288,000,000 of inhabitants, viz, 369,000,000 of the Caucasian race; 552,000,000 of the Mongolian; 196,000,000 of the Ethiopian; 1,000,000 of the American Indian; and 200,000,000 of the Malay races. All these respectively speak 3,064 languages, and profess 1,000 different religions.

The amount of deaths per annum is 833,333,333, or 91,954 per day, 3,780 per hour, 60 per minute, or one per second; so that at every pulsation of our hearts a human being dies. This loss is compensated by an equal number of births. The average duration of life throughout the globe is 33 years. One fourth of its population dies before the seventh year, and one half reaches the twentieth year, 10,000 persons only reach the hundredth year, only one in 500 his eightieth, and only one in 100 his sixty-fifth.

Married people live longer than unmarried ones, and a tall man is likely to live longer than a short one. Until the fiftieth year women have a better chance of life than men, but beyond that period the chances are equal. Sixty-five persons out of 1,000 marry. The months of June and December are those in which marriages are most frequent. Children born in the spring are generally stronger than those born in the autumn. The average age at death is chiefly about at night. The number of men able to bear arms is but one eighth of the population.

The nature of the profession exercises a great influence on longevity: thus out of 100 of each of the following professions, the number who die at the end of the twentieth year is—among, clergymen, 42; agriculturists, 40; traders and manufacturers, 38; soldiers and clerks, 32; lawyers, 29; artists, 28; professors, 27; physicians, 24; so those who study the art of prolonging the lives of others are most liable to die themselves. The power of the effluvia to which they are constantly exposed.

There are in the world 335 millions of Christians, 5 millions of Jews, 600 millions professing some of the Asiatic religions, 160 millions of Mohammedans, 10 millions of Jains, 10 millions of Christians, 10 millions of Buddhists, 76 millions of the Greeks, and 80 millions the Protestant creeds.*

MATRIMONIAL DISPUTES IN SWITZER.

I.A.N.D.

In Bernie they have a novel mode of dealing with matrimonial disputants. Divorces were freely granted, and the parties to the suit the applicant had to go through a curious test. A small room was prepared in which the husband and wife were put—the door being then closed, to remain so for six weeks, and the husband was to make the urgent and reiterated request of the wedded pair. There were in the room one plate, one spoon, a unity of all the requisites, and the solitary bed was of such dimensions that the husband and wife were obliged to lie side by side. It was a very close arrangement, and needed be very close. Of course this, and only one, there was a duplicate, and that was a treatise on the duties of husbands and wives toward each other. No visitor was permitted to go near the room, and the janitor, as he pushed their foot through a hole in the door. The bishop states that the test was attended with the most successful results. Divorces were granted to a large number of excellent friends in a few days; and very few could stand out for more than a fortnight. Another very gratifying circumstance was, that they had not a single case of adultery, and that much confidence was made by persons who had already gone through the ordeal.

NO NECESSITY FOR LIVING.—A man whom Dr. Johnson once reproved for following a useless and demoralizing business said: "You know, doctor, that I must live." The brave old hater of everything mean and hateful coolly replied that he did not "see the least necessity for that."

A FINE HEAD OF HAIR.
 Rev. J. H. CORNELL, N. Y. City, says in a letter: "I procured Mrs. S. A. Allen's Hair Restorer and Zylolysolium for a relative. I am happy to say it prevented the falling out of the hair, and, from being gray, to its natural glossy and beautiful black."

GET THE BEST.
 Rev. C. A. BUCKNER, Treas. Am. Bible Union, N. Y., writes: "I very cheerfully add my name to that of the numerous other friends, to Mrs. S. A. Allen's Hair Restorer and Zylolysolium." The latter has found superior to anything I have ever used.

COMPLIMENTARY

REV. W. M. CUTLER, Ed. Mother's Magazine, N. Y., after Mr. S. A. Allen's World's Hair Restorer and Zylolanium, writes: "My hair is changed to its natural color, and I feel much younger. I shall be glad to have you use my name when it can do you any good."

FROM ENGLAND.

REV. W. B. THORNELK, Prescott, Lancashire, England, writes in a letter: "I have used your Restorer and Zylolanium on perfect marvels. After using them six weeks, my extremely gray hair is restored to its natural color. I am convinced it is not a dye. The sale of these articles is very large in England."

JAS. H. DILL, Esq., 106 Wall Street, New York, certifies that from the use of the Hair Restorer he has obtained a World's Fair Hair Restorer will restore gray hair to its primitive youthful color, and will also remove the hair where baldness has occurred. It is not dry, it does not fall out, it is healthy, it is veridical, it is glorious, it quickly restores the hair, and thus restores it to its primitive beauty.

DON'T READ THIS.

REV. JAS. MCPARLANE, Esq., Ulster County, N. York, writes: "I have no hesitation in certifying that Mrs. S. A. Allen's World's Fair Hair Restorer and Zyobalanum have restored the color and increased the growth of my hair, and I can cheerfully recommend it to all who are afflicted, they may either begin to fall in color or decrease in luxuriance."

NOTHING MORE WANTED.

REV. WM. R. DOWNS, Howard, N. Y., writes: "Mrs. S. A. Allen's Hair Dressing is the best I have used in restoring my hair, and the World's Hair Dressing has no equal. It cleanses the hair and scalp, removes harshness and dryness, and always produces the softness, silkiness and natural gloss so requisite to the 'mane hair.'"

KNOWLEDGE WORTH HAVING.

REV. H. A. PRATT Hampden, Delaware County, N. Y., writes: "He knows that Mrs. S. A. Allen's 'World's Hair Dressing' is the best. It restores the hair to its natural color, prevents the fall, and cures baldness and the diseases incident to the hair and scalp."

BETTER THAN ANY OTHER.

REV. MRS. C. C. MANROSE, of the Anti-Slavery Missionary to Hayti, now of Martinburg, N. Y., (the climate having seri-only affected her hair and scalp," writes: "I have derived much benefit from the use of this medicine, and have tried various other remedies, but never anything that so materially and permanently benefited me."

A DAUGHTER BENEFITED.

REV. DANIEL WOOD, Middlebury, Orange County, N. Y., writes: "By the use of Mrs. S. A. Allen's World's Hair Restorer and Triclosanumum my hair has greatly thickened upon my head, and I am enabled to wear my apparel with more grace and true of my daughter; her hair had become thin, and came out constantly, until we thought the head would be almost bare; her hair has become thick and glossy again, and she has a healthy appearance. We are thankful to you, and feel that we have full value for our money."

HOPE'S REALIZED.

MISS MARY ANN HOPES, 1234 Second Street, New York City, writes: "I have used your hair restorer for several months, and I have been very much benefited. My hair has become thick and glossy again, and I am enabled to wear my apparel with more grace and true of my daughter; her hair had become thin, and came out constantly, until we thought the head would be almost bare; her hair has become thick and glossy again, and she has a healthy appearance. We are thankful to you, and feel that we have full value for our money."

Rev. R. Evans, Delhi, Ohio, writes:

S. A. Allen has changed my hair to its natural color, and stopped its falling off." Could anything more be said in favor of any article!

VALUABLE ARTICLES.

Rev. J. West, No. 6 Washington Place, Pacific Street, Brooklyn, L. I., says in a letter: "I am happy to test my testimony to the value and efficacy of Dr. Allen's Hair Dressing, and World's Hair Dressing in the most liberal sense. They have restored my hair where it was bald, and where gray to its original color."

REPUTATION ESTABLISHED.

S. RANDALL, Esq. Sullivanville, N. Y., says, in a letter recently, of Mrs. S. A. Allen's Zybolism: "It is the best dressing for the hair we can get, and is good for baldness and every ailment of the hair."

Rev. J. S. HOTT, Pastor First Presbyterian Church, Orange, N. J., writes: "I have used Mrs. S. A. Allen's Zylolissimum or World's Hair Restorer and Zylolissimum for World's Hair Restorer for many years, and have found it to be the best hair dressing and healing preparation for removing dandruff, and giving the hair a natural and healthy tone and softness superior to any of my preparation known to me."

JUST THE THING.
REV. E. R. FAIRBANKS, D. D., of the University of Orange-County, N. Y., writes: "Mrs. A. Allen's World's Hair Restorer and Zytholissamenum have been used in my family with beneficial effects. I have taken it as a comestible tonic as much as I have occasion to use 'hair preparations.'"

FOR CHILDREN'S HAIR.
MRS. CLARK, wife of Rev. D. W. Clark, Cincinnati, Ohio, writes: "I have used your Zytholissamenum with most satisfactory results in dressing my own and children's hair.
After trying various articles, I feel no hesitation in recommending yours as the best I have used. It gives the hair a soft, glossy appearance and retains it in any position desired."

TO KNOW IS TO APPROVE.
